Accessibility Tips From Student Disability Services

Test web pages with a keyboard.
Try navigating the web page and controlling all its features using the tab key on a keyboard; don't touch the mouse.

Test pages with high contrast color schemes.
All major operating systems have high contrast color schemes available. When it is enabled, make sure that all important page content is still visible.

Test pages with assistive technologies.
There are free screen readers and other AT available. You don't have to become an expert user, but simple tests with AT can provide valuable insights into whether certain features might present accessibility problems.

Test pages on mobile devices.
Growing numbers of users, including users with disabilities, are accessing the web using phones, tablets, and other mobile devices. Test your website using several mobile devices.
