

UCF College of Medicine is pleased to announce the third cohort (Fall 2023) of Clinical Teaching Certificate Program! This program is aimed at giving clinical educators the essential tools, strategies, and dispositions to deliver high quality clinical education.

Delivered as a six-session series, participants in the program will engage in didactic presentations, group discussions, and case-based exercises.

| Session Topic | Date (all sessions occur from 12-1 pm) |
|---|--|
| Setting Expectations | August 16, 2023 |
| Learning Climate and Control of Session | September 6, 2023 |
| Diagnosing the Learner | September 20, 2023 |
| One-Minute Preceptor | October 4, 2023 |
| Assessment and Evaluation | October 18, 2023 |
| Feedback | November 1, 2023 |

Participant Requirements:

In order to earn the Clinical Teaching certificate, participants must engage in the complete series of six sessions and demonstrate competence related to course objectives within one year of starting the program. The Faculty Life Team will work with each participant to identify a feasible approach to meeting the certification requirement.

Potential pathways for demonstrating competence include:

- Leading a workshop/session in future iterations of this program
- Leading a workshop/session at your local site based on the program objectives
- Teaching Observation - the participant will be observed modeling/applying the principles taught in the program
- Personal Reflection on how the participant intends to integrate principles to practice
- Additional opportunities available – the program is flexible and willing to consider other ideas based on the participants needs and suggestions
