

Promotion Checklist for Affiliated & Volunteer Faculty

---

Which period are you applying for promotion?

Select	Promotion period	Deadline for all documents	If approved, promotion would occur:
<input type="checkbox"/>	Promotion period #1	June 30	January 1
<input type="checkbox"/>	Promotion period #2	December 31	July 1

Required documentation to be submitted by deadline.

- Conduct Promotion Readiness Assessment with either the Assistant or Associate Dean of Faculty Affairs (preferably 6 months in advance of promotion deadline).
- Updated CV. The promotion CV template should be utilized for the promotion review process. You must include all activities related to your role with UCF COM and current UCF COM appointment title. Contact comfacdev@ucf.edu for review/consultation.
- Three names of individuals who have academic appointments at or above the academic rank being considered for the candidate. Please include name, institution, and complete contact information. The Faculty Affairs office will contact them with instructions for writing a letter of evaluation which must discuss the evidence for promotion and how the candidate's accomplishments meet the promotion criteria. At least one letter must be from a module, clerkship, or GME program director or equivalent, or clinical site or unit head. (Current list of COM MD Program Directors: <https://med.ucf.edu/academics/md-program/curriculum-directors/>)
- Personal statement summarizing evidence of activities, products, or achievements commensurate with promotion rank supported by evidence of activities from time of appointment or last promotion. Successful candidates for promotion must be active in College of Medicine activities a majority of time for each year of time in rank.
- Teaching evaluations from activity while in rank are ideal to demonstrate one's trajectory of teaching excellence. These should be submitted individually by year. These may be obtained from the College of Medicine Office of Planning and Knowledge Management (if available) or may be a site-specific evaluation (i.e. some residency and fellowship programs have site-specific evaluation formats which are archived with the program office). While teaching evaluations are preferable and every effort should be made to have these, if teaching evaluations are not available a letter from the department or unit head, or module, clerkship or program director can be used and must address the candidate's teaching quality during the years in rank with comments describing teaching quality, teaching frequency, and teaching skills development.

Please ensure completed packets are submitted by the appropriate deadline to:
